COURSE DESCRIPTION

The Indian epic poem the Mahâbhârata, which took shape over a thousand years, is “seven times the Iliad and Odyssey combined, and a hundred times more interesting” (University of Chicago scholar Wendy Doniger). Like the Iliad, this epic centers on a war. The five Pandava brothers struggle against their hundred cousins, and the world takes sides between them. But war makes up only about a fifth of the epic—which also includes moral and philosophical stories, hero tales, origin stories, and accounts of exemplary women such as the Pandava brothers’ wife, Draupadi. We will use a modern retelling by the poet Carole Satyamurti that contains material from all eighteen books of the original. The result is a poetic version that gives contemporary readers a sense of the power and wonder of the whole.
